The following is the speech of Mr. Adams, our Minister to England, at the Lord ame, our Minister to England, at the Lord Mayor's Banquet:

My Lord Mayor, Ludies and Gentlemer. In behalf of my brethran of the Corps Diplematique, I desire to express our grateful thanks for the compliment which you have paid 1. I take pride in being a mamber of that body, not for any triling personal distinction it mey gira me, but because it opens an opportunity for doing good. Whetever may have been said of diplemacy, it has aver seemed to me one of the great inventions of modern times. Its mission is to preserve peace. In entiquity the quarrels of nations were immediately followed by war. The sword was the only negotiator, and the victorions Invantions of modern times.
